

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I am grateful to my guide Dr. T.G. Naik who guided me in the preparation of the dissertation with a good deal of endurance.

I thank to the staff members of the Economic Department of Shivaji University, Kolhapur who helped me during the course of my M.Phil. I am thankful to Dr. R.R. Doshi, Professor and Head of the Department, Professor (Dr.) J.F. Patil, Dr. Ajit Dange and Shri Dandge and Gavade and the research assistant Shri Sable who helped me at various stages of the M. Phil dissertation.

I also express my sense of gratitude to the staff members of F.D.A. department, Kolhapur, Municipal Corporation, the District Collector Office and Agriculture Department of Government of Maharashtra who provided me the required information without which the dissertation would have been incomplete.

I further express my gratitude to business people like Kapadia, Chintamani Trading Company and others who clarified the conceptual ambiguities.

My words fall short to express my sense of gratitude to my beloved mother and daughter Miss Pratibha who allowed me without any hesitation to spare my time to devote myself to the present research work which embodies this dissertation.

Last but not least, I owe my debts to my husband Shri Prakash L. Halmanyar for efforts taken in collection of official data, samples, testing the samples, explaining the technicalities of food standards and also the provisions of P.F.A. Act. In fact without a dialogue with him, by myself and my guide the dissertation would not have been of the standard for which we aspired.
