

PART - CRECOMMENDATIONS FOR FURTHER RESEARCH.

The nature of the present-study is vast. The investigator compelled to limit the scope of the study. The subject 'Composition writing' has many facts. All the facts can be studied deeply and in many demensions. While conducting the present study, the research worker has come across some areas in the field of composition writing which according to her, have not yet been invested. The deep and exquisite study of these areas is essential to minimize the errors in composition writing. The following areas may be suggested as some of the topics on which the pearchance is much needed.

i) The common errors regarding each standard should be studied. There is need of studying the common errors in composition writing with special reference to each standard.

ii) Effective teaching is helpful to minimize the mistakes in composition writing. So the different methods of teaching various types of compositions should be explored.

iii) It is necessary to evaluate the text-books critically in the context of composition writing.

Text-books should be integrated with composition writing. So the critical study of text books is a good problem for research.

iv) Remedial work is essential to give practice in weak areas. Therefore graded assignments should be given. So the research may be conducted on the role of assignments in minimizing the errors in written English.

v) Mere analysis of errors is not an end of the research work. After analysis, it is an essential task to find out the causes of committing mistakes. Therefore, research regarding the causes of committing mistakes can be held.

vi) The analysis of causes of committing mistakes leads to find out the ways of overcoming these causes. So the critical study of overcoming the difficulties in composition writing is the need of the day.

vii) After sufficient practice also the pupils commit mistakes in their writing. So it is necessary to find out the the remedies to minimize the mistakes. Investigation is necessary to establish the remedies of minimizing the errors.

viii) In order to develop the writing ability, pupils should write on the topics in which they are interested. To collect the information regarding the writing, interest of the pupils might also lead to very fruitful research in area of composition writing.

Handwritten notes in the right margin, partially enclosed by a bracket, including the words "You", "first", "study", and "re".

ix) The methods and techniques of teaching composition affect the composition writing. If the teachers follow appropriate methods and techniques, if they use proper teaching aids, if they participate the pupils in teaching process, the pupils can write better compositions. The researcher, so feels that research regarding the present position of teaching composition is needed.

To sum up it can be said that there is an immediate need to carry out the investigations which are stated above in the field of composition writing.