In a socialist pattern of society, it is the responsibility of the Government and also the employers to see that, the workers are given adequate opportunities for fuller development of their personality. Such an enlightened policy will not only pay the employers in the long run but also help the nation to progressively usher in an egalitarian society. The need for labour welfare in India which has embarked upon a vast programme of industrialisation is all the more important since it creates a healthy atmosphere in the work place, keeps the labour force stable and contented, helps in maintaining industrial peace, thereby improving productive efficiency of the workers.
